Did You Know?

- Rancho Santa Fe, the main home, is a vast wooded oasis in the hills. Older youths study and live in Tegucigalpa.
- Casa de los Ángeles in Tegucigalpa provides a loving home and round-the-clock care to severely disabled children.
- Casa Eva at Rancho Santa Fe (the main site) is home to elderly adults who have no family to care for them.
- Casa Mi Esperanza in Catacamas provides a temporary home for at-risk children while a safe and permanent living situation is found.
- Pasos Pequeñitos in a residential neighborhood of Tegucigalpa provides education, therapy, and nutrition for children up to age 8 whose single parents are working or furthering their education.
- The NPH OneFamily program reintegrates and supports youth from the NPH home who are now able to live with their biological families.
- San José Family Center in Mata de Plátano provides vulnerable children, adolescents, and families with tutoring, physical and psychological therapies, training, health care, and nutritional assistance.
- Holy Family Surgery Center provides outpatient services for NPH children and the rural poor as well as medical training.
- To meet the needs of the physically impaired, there are wheelchair accessible paths/ramps, and a state-of-the-art playground.
- Approximately 27% of all the food eaten in the home is grown or produced on the ranch, including 60% of meat, 10% of fruit and vegetables, and 100% of the milk and dairy products.
